

Some students are unsure about which one of the following programs best fits their career goals and interests: Design and Media Production Technology or Television Production Technology.

Here is a brief description of the two programs for you to compare:

Design and Media Production Technology

The DMPT program offers diploma and degree awards in all areas of graphic design for web, print and video. It also provides training in computer animation, photography, motion graphics and print.

Television Production Technology

The TVPT Associate of Applied Science degree provides training in all areas of video and audio production, including professional camera operation in the studio and field, producing, directing, writing, lighting, editing, graphics, motion graphics and audio. Graduates have found work in television stations, production companies, film production, radio stations and the corporate area.
